

DePaul participated in the inaugural Big East Student Research Poster Symposium on March 12, 2022 at Madison Square Garden in New York City. The event highlighted the outstanding work of undergraduate students in faculty-mentored research projects from each of the 11 universities in the Big East conference. Through a rigorous application process, DePaul selected 5 students to represent DePaul and present their research at this event.

- Chris Nadlony: Posture Control Using Artificial Pelvis
Faculty Advisor: Dr. Muhammad Umer Hazaifa (CDM)
- Hibah Ghazel: Examining the Synthesis, Reactivity, and Biological Activity of 5-amino-5H-Chromenopyridines
Faculty Advisor: Dr. Kyle Grice (CSH)
- Isaac Daitzchman: Atmospheric Phosphorus Deposition into Fresh Water Wetlands
Faculty Advisor: Dr. James Montgomery (CSH)
- Jennifer Garcia: What's in Your Soil?
Faculty Advisor: Dr. James Montgomery (CSH)
- Joshua Chis: The Ring of Fire: Mapping the Exchange of User Data Through Data Brokers
Faculty Advisor: Dr. David Wang (BUS)

Drs. Lauren Miller and James Montgomery travelled with the students and served as judges at the competition. Winners were announced during halftime at the Big East Championship basketball game. It was an incredible experience for the students as they were able to present on their research, network with students from other universities, and experience the sites of a great city, all while showcasing the intersections of academics and athletics.
